SUPER SUMMER

Hope carriers and light bearers,

Today we face staggering projections, unprecedented challenges, and seemingly limitless unknowns. It makes for dark, hopeless circumstances for virtually every human on earth. Read that again, take it in, it's sobering.

But, Super Summer is in the good news business and while we are all in these times together only some of us carry deep within us the only hope, the only light, in this darkness. If anyone is equipped to face uncertain days it is you, me, and those we have trained to know and share the gospel. Remember, the word gospel means good news. Don't forget it.

In light of difficult days ahead, in agreement with those who lead us at Texas Baptists, and ultimately under conviction of the Spirit, we made the choice to cancel the 2020 Super Summer sessions.

While our face to face, mass gatherings won't occur this year, our team is dreaming up ways to encourage Texas' most equipped deliverers of good news. Be on the lookout for more information on that soon.

You might be wondering about what will happen with the registration monies from those already registered. Texas Baptists would like to ease the burden on churches so we will make it our practice in this season to give full refunds. We will work to build that process and get back with registered participants soon, but we wanted you to know what to expect.

We will address other secondary matters soon, so keep opening our emails. Until then, be strong and courageous. Now is the moment when the trained are all deployed. Your personal world around you needs the hope and light you have in Jesus; give it freely and boldly.

Know it and share it until all the nations hear it,
Jason Richards
Director of Super Summer
